Cash's World, 24x42", oil on masonite, Copyright Karen Brenner 2011

Cash's World

My newest painting features Alpha horse, Cash, as he herds his pasture mates to the lone shade tree at the far end of the field. As I was working on this painting, I continually thought about the Andrew Wyeth painting, Christina's World. The grassy hill, the close image of the subject of the painting in the bottom left, and the destination in the upper right all seemed similar. That is why I named this painting Cash's World.

New York Horse Paintings Progressing

The Beautiful Horses of New York series paintings are progressing nicely! All 50 masonite boards are sanding and primed. The first dozen pictures have been sketched, and horses are emerging. It is an exciting series to work on because those New York horses were wonderful models. Hopefully the first paintings will be completed in the next couple months. Stay tuned for the first images!
